

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to novel methods for the analysis of interactions of target molecules and cells. In particular, the present invention relates to compositions and methods for the detection of molecules involved in various aspects of cellular development.

- 5 The present invention further provides methods of screening molecules for association with cellular development.